

SurviveAZ

The intent of this website is to create a one-stop resource for outdoor enthusiasts and survivalists of Arizona (and those visiting the state for that purpose) to gain the information, knowledge and any outdoor items and/or gear they will need for their next outdoor adventure.

The goal is to eliminate confusion, excessive research, inaccurate and redundant information, and inadequate preparation by the user which could save time, money, legal issues and potentially save a life.

This website should build confidence in a user that they have found a reliable source for outdoor information (in Arizona) that they can trust and refer back to whenever needed. Following the MVP method, the root pages of this website will be a home, about, contact, Arizona (outdoor news, closures, permits and restrictions), and survival basics (food, water, fire and shelter).

Additional features will include an outdoor gear page with packs, sleeping bags, tents, tools, fire starters, etc., with a cart and checkout. It will also include information on public and off-grid camp locations, maps and travel, preparation, calendar of events, resource links and a social feed.

I will break the additional website build down in the following ordered sections: content rich survival page (must knows), basic necessary gear (cart and checkout), API to sites such as AZ game and fish, AZ department of forest and fire, AZ bureau of land management, AZ state parks, AZ state land department.

There are many online resources for outdoorsmen type activities in Arizona as well as survival websites. However, I have yet to find a source that contains all of the information in one place, and in an easily absorbable format.

Websites that contain some of the information I'll be resources include:
